

The June AFS Meeting Dwight Lyman and Laura Ross on Global Warming

Scientific evidence for warming of the climate system is unequivocal.
- Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change

The speakers for the June 14th AFS meeting are Dwight Lyman and his wife, AFS President Laura Ross. The topic will be global warming. The scientific consensus is that global warming is causing extreme climate change and we are already seeing its predicted effects worldwide: melting polar ice caps and glaciers, droughts, extinctions, ocean acidification, extreme weather events such as snowstorms and flooding, rising sea levels. These effects are expected to become more common and severe over the coming decades.

Dwight Lyman

While global temperature shifts have occurred during the course of the earth's history, the current warming trend is of particular significance because most of it is human-induced and proceeding at a rate that is unprecedented in the past 1,300 years. While in all probability we have passed the tipping point, there are some things that humans can do to minimize the impact of global warming. The question is, do we have the political willpower?

Dwight will start off giving a presentation of the history of this important discovery, and Laura will then follow-up by leading an audience discussion on the controversies and the politics of this phenomenon. Be prepared to share what you know!

Remember that at noon before the lecture starting at 1:00, there will be a potluck lunch which will be outdoors if the weather's nice. Please look to the right to see what you are supposed to bring.

The Atlanta Freethought Society is a member-run organization dedicated to advancing freethought and protecting the rights and reputation of freethinkers, agnostics, atheists and humanists.

We welcome anyone who is interested in learning about living a good life free from religion through attending AFS speeches, debates, and discussions. We employ protests, letters to the editor, broadcast appearances, and any other reasonable and civil means available to achieve our mission.

We define freethought as “the forming of opinions about life in general and religion in particular on the basis of reason and the evidence of our senses, independently of tradition, authority, or established belief.”

We actively support a strict separation of church and state as the best means to guarantee liberty for all, regardless of religious belief or lack of belief.

We seek to educate ourselves on many topics but especially on religion and non-religion. We do this through a series of thought-provoking speakers and programs, and by maintaining a web forum and an extensive library of freethought, religious, and related books, pamphlets, videotapes, and audiotapes.

We provide an organization where freethinkers and non-theists can develop friendships, talk freely, socialize and enjoy each other’s company. We do not discriminate against anyone on such irrelevant grounds as race, sexual orientation, age, gender, class, or physical disability. We welcome members and leaders of all political parties and preferences.

Because we are designated by the IRS as a 501(c)(3) educational organization, contributions to AFS are tax deductible.

Any who are like-minded are welcome to join us.

Happy Birth (Control) Day! A Golden Anniversary That Shouldn't Be Overlooked

By Rob Boston in Americans United for Separation of Church and State
Wall of Separation, June 5, 2015

<https://au.org/blogs/wall-of-separation/happy-birth-control-day-a-golden-anniversary-that-shouldn-t-be-overlooked>

American women today enjoy a right that for thousands of years of human civilization was virtually unheard of: The power to decide if they will have children and if so, how many they will have.

For that, you can thank lots of people, chief among them the scientists and researchers who invented and later perfected safe and effective forms of contraception.

But you can also thank a woman many people have never heard of. Her name is Estelle Griswold.

In the early 1960s, birth control options were growing. Condoms had been around for a long time, but things like contraceptive foams, IUDs and early types of birth-control pills were still relatively new. (The U.S. Food and Drug Administration had approved the first birth-control pill in 1960.) These forms of contraception existed, but in some parts of the country there was a problem: They could be very hard to get.

Powerful religious lobbies didn't want couples – even married ones – to have access to birth control. They used their influence to make it next to impossible for people to get birth control in some states.

That changed because of events in one New England state. In Connecticut, an 1879 law banned the sale of contraceptives (<https://www.au.org/church-state/may-2012-church-state/featured/sex-sects-and-the-battle-over-contraception>). (The law had been proposed by state Sen. P.T. Barnum, who had entered politics following his national fame as a circus showman <http://federalbarcouncilquarterly.org/?p=396>.) Not only did the law ban the sale of birth control, it also prohibited doctors from counseling couples about it. Although only sporadically enforced, the measure was enough of a nuisance that advocates of women's rights knew that it had to go.

They first tried lobbying the legislature to repeal the antiquated law. But the state's powerful Catholic hierarchy put the kibosh on those efforts, so Griswold, executive director of the Planned Parenthood League of Connecticut, joined forces with Dr. Charles Lee Buxton, chairman of the Obstetrics Department at Yale Medical School, to try a different strategy: They decided to test the law in court.

To create a test case, the two opened a clinic in New Haven to dispense information about birth control. The clinic didn't handle any actual birth control devices; it merely distributed information about options. Nine days after it opened, police raided the clinic and arrested Griswold and Buxton – which was just what they wanted.

Connecticut courts were not sympathetic to Griswold's and Buxton's arguments, but the U.S. Supreme Court felt differently. On June 7, 1965, the high court struck down Connecticut's anti-birth control statute. Ruling 7-2 in Griswold v. Connecticut, the court majority, led by Justice William O. Douglas, cited a “zone of privacy created by several fundamental constitutional guarantees.”

Douglas went on to write, “Would we allow the police to search the sacred precincts of marital bedrooms for telltale signs of the use of contraceptives? The very idea is repulsive to the notions of privacy surrounding the marriage relationship. We deal with a right of privacy older than the Bill of Rights....”

That “zone of privacy” resurfaced over the years. It was cited in later cases that struck down laws barring use of birth control by unmarried people. It appeared in 1973's Roe v. Wade, the abortion-rights case. It returned in 2003 when the Supreme Court struck down a Texas law criminalizing consensual same-sex relationships in Lawrence v. Texas.

I often give talks about church-state issues to local groups and at conferences, and every time I bring up the Griswold case, I notice a generational divide: The younger people are startled to learn how bad things once were. The older folks, who lived through it, merely nod their heads knowingly.

The older crowd has some wisdom for us on this matter. Their experiences remind us that just about every advance of human rights and individual freedom concerning sexuality was accompanied by a fight against entrenched opposition from repressive religious groups that were certain they knew what was best for everyone.

Their grip was broken, thanks to brave people like Estelle Griswold. The theocrats among us are still smarting from that loss of power. They would like to get it back, and they constantly plot for that.

Don't think they can't succeed. Remember, it was just last year that the Supreme Court, in its absurd Hobby Lobby ruling (<https://www.au.org/church-state/september-2014-church-state/featured/building-backlash>), declared that some corporations can exercise religion and have the right to deny their employees access to birth control in health-care plans.

Estelle Griswold died in 1981 (<http://www.cwhf.org/inductees/reformers/estelle-griswold/#.VW81v0bANQo>). This weekend, take a moment to reflect on what she and other advocates did for us. But do more than reflect on Griswold's legacy – vow to defend it.

FFRF objects to Ga. teacher's classroom proselytizing

<https://ffrf.org/news/news-releases/item/23001-ffrf-objects-to-ga-teacher-s-classroom-proselytizing>

The Freedom From Religion Foundation has lodged a complaint with the Douglas County School System after learning that science teacher James Tillman reportedly promotes his personal beliefs to students and actively tried to convert one atheist student to Christianity.

A parent of a Douglas County High School student informed FFRF that upon learning the student was an atheist, Tillman quizzed him during class about atheism. Tillman allegedly asked why the student was an atheist and whether his parents were atheists, and challenged the student with hypothetical situations like "What if you had cancer and it suddenly went away?" Tillman concluded by telling the student he was going to give the student a book that may change the student's opinion.

Tillman later gave the student two signed copies of a book he had written titled Are You Sure That There is No God, inscribed with the message "Be Blessed." According to its Amazon product page (<http://www.amazon.com/Are-You-Sure-There-God/dp/1470089025>), the book contains purported "real accounts from real people who have meet [sic] or experienced God and Jesus first-hand," and touts, "If you have any doubt as to whether God is real, or if your faith is weak, all that will change after reading this book."

Tillman also allegedly talked about being a pastor in class and showed a video to students of him preaching and praying from the pulpit.

FFRF sent the school district's attorney a letter of complaint on May 26. "As you are aware, it is inappropriate and unconstitutional for teachers to use students' time at school to promote their personal religious views," wrote FFRF Attorney Madeline Ziegler. "Tillman's imposition of his religious beliefs on a classroom of students is an unconstitutional endorsement of religion over nonreligion, and his overt attempt to convert our complainant's child to Christianity is inexcusable."

"Public schools should strive to be welcoming to families of all faiths and non-faith," said Ziegler. Tillman's actions "turned our complainant's child and other non-Christians into outsiders at their school."

FFRF also called for an investigation into Tillman's role as the head of the school's Christian club. "Given Tillman's exceedingly inappropriate conduct in the incidents described above, we doubt his role with the First Priority Club is nonparticipatory as required by the Equal Access Act," wrote Ziegler.

If Tillman cannot teach without inserting his personal religious beliefs into class or trying to convert students, he should be dismissed, says FFRF, or at the very least disciplined appropriately.

"Is Culture God?" Maybe not, but neither is Hines

By Ed Buckner in Marietta Daily Journal, Friday, May 29, 2015

Dear Editor:

Columnist Roger Hines (Is Culture God" MDJ, 224 May) offers a false choice. His column is an attack on the Girl Scouts, an organization that in general I admire. I don't have enough information about the Girl Scouts' policies on gender identification to know whether they're being wise in this case. But I do know that Hines seriously misleads your readers when he says that "History is not God. Neither is culture." We don't need to adapt to the culture or the times. His arguments here are the same arguments that many conservatives and Christians and traditionalists have used for generations in supporting policies based on allegedly God-given differences:

- denying women the vote
- keeping black Americans from having equal civil rights
- Imposing prison or death for being homosexual
- making it illegal for people of different races to wed
- making it illegal for people of the same sex to wed'

- permitting slavery

All of these policies were considered in their day to be fair, just, and derived from the word of God, to be based on what Hines called "time-honored truths and facts." All of them are now considered by most reasonable people to be unjust, inhumane, and morally repugnant.

What has changed in every case is interpretation of what "God" wants. That suggests that declaring something wrong because of a Bible verse or what seems to be an obvious interpretation is dangerous to liberty and human rights.
