

The January AFS Meeting

Mark Banks, AFS Board Member: “Creating a Sense of Community for the Non-Believer”

Mark Banks was born into a very exciting and dangerous time. With the cold war, the McCarthy communist witch hunts and the space race it was best to quietly observe all the insanity going on.

Mark Banks

He also had a front row seat during the early days of the civil rights movement. He observed all the religiously inspired hypocrisy and blind raging hate directed at the “colored” community. The adults around him were paranoid about nuclear war, Communism, the space race and a possible race war. Needless to say, he was concerned about the survival of humanity.

During this time, he became a science nerd. One of his earliest memories was of the launch of Sputnik in 1957. He has had a lifelong interest in Astronomy, Cosmology, space exploration and all of the related fields of science. He has been a member of the Atlanta Astronomy Club for 25+ years and President of the club for the past 5 years. You just can't beat the scientific method for finding out what is real and what is myth, superstition, nonsense, theology, pseudoscience and other forms of B.S.

After high school he went into the Air Force. In the Air Force he was able to use his knowledge of science and technology to get involved working with electronic warfare equipment. After leaving the Air Force he acquired degrees in Electrical Engineering and Industrial Management.

After college he spent 20+ years in the aerospace industry primarily involved with avionics, electronic warfare and encryption systems. During this time he had a front row seat watching great advancements in science and technology over the years.

After retiring from the aerospace industry he became involved in a number of other related business ventures. He has stayed in touch with the aerospace industry through Consulting/contracting work with various entities within the military industrial community. He has been involved in other business ventures. He became a Real Estate broker, Mortgage broker, Securities Dealer, and Real Estate investor.

The idea of “retirement” is an alien concept to him. He is now involved with the Freethought movement, the environmental movement, the Astronomy Club, and numerous other activities. His goal is to leave this world a better place for future generations. He has been described as a hyperactive senior citizen and he says that he resembles that remark!

The Atlanta Freethought Society is a member-run organization dedicated to advancing freethought and protecting the rights and reputation of freethinkers, agnostics, atheists and humanists.

We welcome anyone who is interested in learning about living a good life free from religion through attending AFS speeches, debates, and discussions. We employ protests, letters to the editor, broadcast appearances, and any other reasonable and civil means available to achieve our mission.

We define freethought as “the forming of opinions about life in general and religion in particular on the basis of reason and the evidence of our senses, independently of tradition, authority, or established belief.”

We actively support a strict separation of church and state as the best means to guarantee liberty for all, regardless of religious belief or lack of belief.

We seek to educate ourselves on many topics but especially on religion and non-religion. We do this through a series of thought-provoking speakers and programs, and by maintaining a web forum and an extensive library of freethought, religious, and related books, pamphlets, videotapes, and audiotapes.

We provide an organization where freethinkers and non-theists can develop friendships, talk freely, socialize and enjoy each other’s company. We do not discriminate against anyone on such irrelevant grounds as race, sexual orientation, age, gender, class, or physical disability. We welcome members and leaders of all political parties and preferences.

Because we are designated by the IRS as a 501(c)(3) educational organization, contributions to AFS are tax deductible.

Any who are like-minded are welcome to join us.

Black Nonbelievers (BN) is a 501(c)(3) non-profit fellowship of nonbelievers headquartered in the Atlanta area that is dedicated to providing an informative, caring, festive and friendly environment. It strives to connect with other Blacks (and their allies) who are living free of religion and irrational beliefs, and might otherwise be shunned by family and friends. Instead of accepting dogma, BN seeks to determine truth and morality through reason and evidence.

BN welcomes all regardless of sex, sexuality, gender identity, age, national origin or race. BN extends a caring embrace to all who wish to participate in exploring a meaningful rational life.

Mission

The mission of Black Nonbelievers is to...

- Provide secular fellowship.
- Nurture and support nonbelievers in coming out.
- Promote atheist pride.
- Organize nonbelievers for charitable causes.

Meetings

BN members meet to discuss topics relevant to secular living as well as to socialize and offer support. We also offer workshops, and other gatherings to educate the public on the views of nonbelievers. Unless otherwise noted, all meetings and events are open to the general public. (See our Calendar for details on specific meetings and activities.)

Why is this a fellowship of 'nonbelievers'?

The word 'nonbeliever' speaks to the kind of mindset BN encourages. BN encourages people to move from a mindset of faith and belief to reason and rationality. BN is not just nonbelievers in religion, but are nonbelievers in any claim, religious or otherwise, that is not supported by good evidence. Each of us may be at different stages on the journey of rational enlightenment. As free-thinkers (rational nonbelievers) we evaluate beliefs and claims, then reconsider our position when the evidence calls for a different conclusion.

Black Nonbelievers now has affiliate groups in the following cities:

- Charlotte
- Chicago
- Dallas
- Detroit
- DC
- Louisville
- Milwaukee
- Memphis
- Orlando

Freedom Of Conscience: The Greatest Gift Of All

by Rob Boston in Wall of Separation

<https://www.au.org/blogs/wall-of-separation/freedom-of-conscience-the-greatest-gift-of-all>

People sometimes ask me why I got so interested in defending separation of church and state. The answer is simple: As a kid, I was sent to a Catholic school for eight years.

Don't get me wrong. I had a lot of good teachers there and learned many things. But I found the school's tendency to micro-manage prayer troubling. Three times a day, like clockwork, a nun, priest or lay teacher would order everyone to stand up and pray. In unison, we would chant one of two prayers – the "Our Father" or the "Hail Mary" – before sitting down for the lesson.

Even as a kid, I was struck by this. Something wasn't right. If prayer is an attempt to connect with the divine, the eternal or with God, how can it be so regimented? Most of the time, I didn't even think about the words I was mumbling. It was all by rote. We prayed because someone ordered us to, not because we felt the need to connect with a Supreme Being.

A private Catholic school had the right to make us pray like this, and I'm sure the nuns and priests thought it would increase our piety. Maybe it did for some kids, but in my case it backfired. As I got older, I became less and less interested in formalized and ritualized prayer, which felt spiritually empty to me. I started to chafe against the idea that individuals in authority could make me do it.

In ninth grade, I switched to a public school. Pennsylvania law at that time allowed for a moment of silence at the beginning of the day. It was a neutral moment. We weren't urged to pray or do anything else. It was just there. After the Pledge of Allegiance and the morning announcements, the voice wafting over the public address system announced that we would observe a moment of silence.

I found this liberating. I could pray if I wanted – or not. The choice was mine. My teacher certainly didn't care, and as I looked around, I had no idea what my peers were doing. Perhaps some were praying, perhaps not.

Thinking back on it now, I realize that was a decisive moment. I could make my own decision. As guided by my individual conscience, I – not some school official or religious leader – was in control of my spiritual life.

Once you get a taste of that, there's really no going back.

That seems like a basic thing, something all people would want. And it is. Yet we know there are people in America today who have a problem with that concept. After all, too much freedom might lead you to pick the "wrong" religion or to reject them all.

So these people promote official, mandated, compelled prayer in public schools. They demand that government erect and support the symbols of their faith (but not others or non-belief). They labor to subject us all to the rigid moral rules of their own faith.

What they don't understand is that we in the United States have been given a great gift: the absolute right of conscience resting on a wall of separation between church and state. As much as the Religious Right tries to decouple those two concepts, they remain closely linked. The wall provides essential support to the right of conscience. If the wall collapses, freedom of conscience falls with it.

It is difficult, if not impossible, for true freedom of conscience to exist when the government has a favored faith. If you are constantly reminded by state officials that your religious (or non-religious) beliefs are second class, that they are merely tolerated by the benevolence of those who have accessed real religious truth, you are not free.

At this time of year, when many people are celebrating holidays that involve gift-giving, we should be thankful for the gift of complete freedom of conscience bequeathed to us by our founders. Yes, in some ways it was not theirs to give because it is an inherent human right – but the hard truth is that it's one that not all nations recognize.

Ours does. And unlike a sweater or an electronic gadget, the fundamental right of conscience never goes out of style or breaks, although it certainly can be eroded.

Enjoy that gift. Treasure it. Use it regularly.

Most importantly, vow to defend it.

The same applies when you are stupid."

‘Religious’ hospitals not exempt from retirement regulations

<http://ffrf.org/news/news-releases/item/25261-religious-hospitals-not-exempt-from-retirement-regulations>

The Third Circuit Court of Appeals ruled yesterday that large healthcare companies are not exempt from retirement plan regulations, even if they operate “religious” hospitals.

The Employee Retirement Income Security Act (ERISA) regulates retirement plans, but exempts church plans from requirements such as paying insurance premiums, meeting minimum funding standards and disclosing funding levels to plan participants.

FFRF filed an amicus brief earlier this year in the lawsuit contending that hospitals are not entitled to church privileges.

New Jersey’s Saint Peter’s Healthcare System employees filed class-action suits against their employers for claiming the church plan exemption. These large non-profit hospital systems have been able to contravene ERISA and underfund employees’ retirement plans by claiming the church exemption. The plaintiffs argued the employers are not churches, and are not operated or funded by religious organizations, so their employers should not be able to claim the church plan exemption.

The district court ruled that Saint Peter’s could not use the exemption and the Third Circuit has agreed: “The plain terms of ERISA only make these exemptions available to plans established in the first instance by churches. Because St. Peter’s is not a church, the exemption is unavailable.”

FFRF submitted amicus briefs in similar cases before the Seventh and Ninth Circuits as well. FFRF briefs called the “church plan exemption” itself to be unconstitutional under the First Amendment because it treats churches preferentially.

FFRF thanks former FFRF Legal Extern Jarvis Idowu for researching and drafting FFRF’s amicus briefs with staff attorneys Patrick Elliott and Andrew L. Seidel.
