

The December AFS Meeting

Chuck Miller on the documentary “Exodus”

On Sunday, December 11, Atlanta Freethought Society is fortunate to welcome Executive Producer Charles R. “Chuck” Miller, a consultant and secular activist who will talk about the upcoming documentary “Exodus.” Chuck has played a key role in casting and consulting on the development of the film.

Chuck Miller

“Exodus” is a feature-length documentary about the growing number of African-Americans leaving religion. Award-winning journalist David Person takes a look at this trend by examining the lives of Black atheists and illuminating interviews with pastors and theologians commenting on the implications for the church and community. The subjects tell their stories of coming out atheist, including the prejudice and social problems they face as part of the most religious demographic in America.

“Exodus” will be a powerful film that needs to be seen by a mass audience to create better understanding of non-religious African-Americans. Making a broadcast quality documentary for a mass audience is a large undertaking. We know this subject is important and deserves an in-depth journalistic treatment.

“Exodus” is being produced to reach the mass audience of television viewers, many of whom have never had a conversation with an African-American atheist. Wide distribution of “Exodus” on broadcast and cable television will make that possible. The interviews and cinéma vérité “slice of life” segments in “Exodus” present an authentic view of African-American atheists, illuminated by commentary from fellow non-believers and clergy. A mass audience needs to see this documentary in order to understand a little discussed and often misunderstood social trend. In addition, “Exodus” will give Black atheists an authentic voice that must be heard. Interviews with clergy will provide the counterpoint for journalistic integrity.

Notes from the Editor:

Since the art show currently on the walls does not currently have a replacement (hint hint), we will be leaving the art on the walls another month. If you'd like to make a purchase for the holidays and support our AFS artists as well as AFS, let us know! Everything is for sale—talk to the artists or to members of the board if you are interested.

Also, if you would like to hang your own work, let us know about that as well. The application is on page 7 next to the membership form.

If you are a paid member, you will have received a ballot for board elections. If you haven't mailed them in already, bring them to the meeting on Sunday. Volunteers who are not currently running for office are needed to help count ballots.

It is December and 2017 membership fees are due this month to give us an idea about next year's budget. You can find an application on page 7 of this newsletter. Your support helps pay for the building, supplies, printing, etc. as well as honorariums for our wonderful speakers.

The Atlanta Freethought Society is a member-run organization dedicated to advancing freethought and protecting the rights and reputation of freethinkers, agnostics, atheists and humanists.

We welcome anyone who is interested in learning about living a good life free from religion through attending AFS speeches, debates, and discussions. We employ protests, letters to the editor, broadcast appearances, and any other reasonable and civil means available to achieve our mission.

We define freethought as “the forming of opinions about life in general and religion in particular on the basis of reason and the evidence of our senses, independently of tradition, authority, or established belief!”

We actively support a strict separation of church and state as the best means to guarantee liberty for all, regardless of religious belief or lack of belief.

We seek to educate ourselves on many topics but especially on religion and non-religion. We do this through a series of thought-provoking speakers and programs, and by maintaining a web forum and an extensive library of freethought, religious, and related books, pamphlets, videotapes, and audiotapes.

We provide an organization where freethinkers and non-theists can develop friendships, talk freely, socialize and enjoy each other’s company. We do not discriminate against anyone on such irrelevant grounds as race, sexual orientation, age, gender, class, or physical disability. We welcome members and leaders of all political parties and preferences.

Because we are designated by the IRS as a 501(c)(3) educational organization, contributions to AFS are tax deductible. Any who are like-minded are welcome to join us.

Significant logical errors about Satan and Good News Clubs

Dear Editor:

Marietta Daily Journal columnist Kevin Foley wrote a recent wise column on all the brouhaha about the Good News and Satan Clubs (MDJ, 28 October). The commentary since, by letters-to-the-editor writers, school board members, and others has included some basic logical and constitutional mistakes.

No one—not Christians or atheists or Satanists or believers in heaven and a merciful God or agnostics—no one has the final say on these matters, which cannot be resolved to everyone’s satisfaction by evidence and logic. Some are convinced that heaven is real, some not; some that there is a true religion, others that there is none or that their own is truer than yours.

When government agents—including public school officials—take sides, they cannot resolve matters and the real power of government means they can make things worse.

Four American ideas support separation of government and religion, four that every American should accept fully:

1. Americans do not all agree on religion.
2. Human judgement is imperfect.
3. Religious truth cannot be determined by force or by majority vote.
4. Religious liberty is worth defending.

Accept all four and you should understand why public schools should not host Good News Clubs or Satan Clubs.

Regards,
Ed Buckner

Atheists Billboards Say ‘Skip Church’ for a Merrier Christmas

news.atheists.org

In what has become an annual holiday tradition, American Atheists launched two billboards nationwide urging viewers to celebrate an “atheist Christmas” by skipping church. Several of the locations are in southern states to start promoting the solar eclipse convention the atheists will be hosting in Charleston, SC, in August 2017.

The first billboard shows a text message exchange between two young women. One tells the other about her plans to skip church this holiday season and that her parents will “get over it.” This billboard will be up the entire month of December in Colorado Springs, Colorado; Lynchburg, Virginia; Augusta, Georgia; Shreveport, Louisiana; and Georgetown, South Carolina, a short drive from the site of the upcoming convention in Charleston.

“It is important for people to know religion has nothing to do with being a good person, and that being open and honest about what you believe—and don’t believe—is the best gift you can give this holiday season,” said David Silverman, president of American Atheists. “More and more Americans are leaving religion, but we still have work to do when it comes to fighting the stigma many atheists face.”

The second billboard is a parody of President-elect Donald Trump’s campaign slogan. The message calls on atheists to “Make Christmas Great Again!” by skipping church. During the campaign, Trump repeatedly pledged that stores would say “Merry Christmas” rather than “Happy Holidays” if he were to win the presidency. That billboard will be up the entire month of December in Lynchburg, Virginia, and Shreveport, Louisiana.

A recent survey from the Public Religion Research Institute shows that a quarter of Americans and almost 40% of young people are atheist or non-religious. This billboard campaign is specifically aimed at that growing population, especially those who no longer believe but still occasionally attend religious services or call themselves religious despite their lack of belief.

“The only way to remove the stigma is to show our friends and family that we are the same kind, loving and compassionate people they’ve always known us to be,” said Nick Fish, national program director for American Atheists. “This billboard campaign will be a starting point for that conversation in communities where atheists don’t always have a voice.”

Trump's Health and Human Services Nominee a Disaster for Religious Freedom, LGBT People, Women

news.atheists.org

On November 29, 2016 President-elect Donald Trump announced U.S. Representative Tom Price, of Georgia, as his nominee for Secretary of Health and Human Services. In response to this nomination, Amanda Knief, national public policy director of American Atheists, released the following statement.

"American Atheists again must sound the alarm on behalf of Americans concerned about the separation of religion from government as the incoming Trump Administration takes shape. By nominating Rep. Price to serve as Secretary of Health and Human Services, the President-elect is signaling that his administration will embrace the divisive rhetoric and disastrous policies of the religious right.

"Rep. Price is a co-sponsor of the so-called 'First Amendment Defense Act' (FADA), a bill that would give individuals, public businesses, healthcare providers, and even government employees the ability to essentially break any laws that conflict with their religious views on marriage or sex outside of marriage. This law would elevate religious dogma above civil rights laws and gut existing protections for LGBT people and women.

"Rep. Price's extreme record on women's healthcare is dangerous and rooted entirely in religious beliefs rather than science. He has sponsored legislation granting personhood rights to fetuses, attempted to ban abortions after 20 weeks, has backed allowing employers to fire workers who use birth control or have abortions, and has said that the provision of the Affordable Care Act that guarantees coverage for birth control 'is a trampling of religious freedom and religious liberty in this country.'

"The continued re-definition of 'religious liberty' pushed by people such as Rep. Price has eroded the rights of LGBT people and women, and indeed all Americans, and American Atheists will continue to fight against any attempt to use religion as a weapon in public policy."

Trump Wanted Jerry Falwell Jr. To Run The U.S. Department of Education

by Rob Boston in Wall of Separation

www.au.org

If there's anyone out there who still thinks the Donald Trump presidency won't be so bad for separation of church and state, chew on this: Trump offered the job of Education Secretary to Jerry Falwell Jr.

That's right: Trump was prepared to turn the U.S. Department of Education over to a biblical literalist who would have been absolutely unqualified for the job.

Did I mention he's a creationist? And that he rails against the LGBTQ community? That he once told students at Liberty University to arm themselves against "those Muslims?"

Falwell does run Liberty University, a large conservative Christian college in Lynchburg, Va. He inherited it from his father. But this hardly means the younger Falwell is prepared to oversee the American public school system, which serves more than 50 million children.

Imagine a man whose university runs a Center for Creation Studies that aims to "research, promote, and communicate a robust young-Earth creationist view of Earth history" overseeing public education in America.

Under Falwell Jr., this might have been a science text for public schools.

Imagine how Falwell would have handled the rights of LGBTQ students in public schools. Imagine him promoting "Christian nation" fake history penned by his pal David Barton.

And make no mistake, Falwell would have had the leverage to interfere in all of these issues. Public education in the United States is largely funded at the local level, usually through property taxes. But the federal government contributes some aid as well. It's hard to pin down the precise figure because the feds spread it out over a number of programs, but one estimate by The New York Times put federal education spending at more than $107 billion annually.

Falwell told the Associated Press that Trump offered him the top job at the Education Department when the two met in New York City after the election. Reportedly, Trump wanted Falwell to commit to at least four years, which Falwell wasn't willing to do.

But Falwell continues to imply that he'll have some role to play in the Education Department, and the education secretary Trump did name, Betsy DeVos, is known primarily for promoting private school vouchers. The country may have dodged Falwell, but the appointee we got isn't much better.

Public education in the United States faces significant challenges. Adequate funding is essential, as is building community support for the schools.

A strong leader could call on Americans to rally around their public schools, since they are the only educational institutions that by law welcome children of all religions, races and socio-economic backgrounds.

By offering important positions to people like Falwell and DeVos, who not only don't prioritize public education but seem to disagree with its core mission, Trump has exposed his true colors: We can expect at least four years of an Education Department that focuses on private institutions while the public schools that serve 90 percent of our children are an afterthought.

Religious Registries Have A Disturbing History

by Irissa Cisternino in Wall of Separation

www.au.org

The election of Donald Trump to the presidency has renewed talk about creating some sort of national registry of Muslims entering the United States. In some versions, this is similar to the disastrous Bush database enacted after 9/11.

Though not unexpected given Trump's campaign rhetoric over the past year and a half, the proposal is still frankly horrifying—not only because it's a blatantly unconstitutional form of religious discrimination and persecution, but because we've seen this before.

After the story broke on Trump's proposed database, a Trump surrogate cited a precedent for this type of discrimination: Japanese internment camps—one of America's least proud moments.

But as I watched this man scramble to defend actions that were indefensible, I thought to myself, there's a much more accurate and much uglier analogy for this: Nazi Germany.

I don't make this comparison lightly, but the parallels are worth examining. In 1939 and 1940, the Third Reich instituted compulsory registration for Jewish citizens in countries Germany had invaded as part of a massive program of anti-Semitic legislation. This was among a series of anti-Jewish laws that eventually culminated in the mass extermination of six million people.

In light of this history, is it any wonder people get nervous when any politician starts talking about keeping lists of people by religion?

Singling out members of certain religions for a registry is unconstitutional—and fundamentally un-American.

Throughout his almost two-year campaign, President-elect Trump had some awful things to say about Muslim Americans. He called for a complete shutdown of Muslims entering the United States (before walking it back and then calling for it again), at one point insinuated that Muslims should be compelled to report suspicions of terrorism and stated that he saw Muslims in New Jersey cheering on 9/11 (which is completely false).

He has also implied on more than one occasion that all Muslims should have to register with the government, including, apparently, those who are citizens. In November of 2015, he was specifically asked about this by an NBC News reporter who wanted to know how his plan differed from Nazi Germany's policies. Trump's reply was a flip, "You tell me."

Such inflammatory rhetoric invokes another disturbing comparison to World War II: official anti-Semitism in pre-war Germany. In the years before the war, the German government and German citizens began distributing anti-Jewish propaganda all over the country, creating a hatred of Jews that was unprecedented.

The current campaign to scapegoat Muslims is disturbingly familiar.

Now that Trump is soon to take office, his casual talk of targeting Muslims is rebounding around the nation. We've seen numerous incidents of anti-Muslim bias and even assaults on Muslims.

There is a political echo, too. Recently, a Georgia lawmaker proposed a bill that would make it illegal for Muslim women to wear a hijab or other type of Islamic veil in public before abruptly rescinding it after an (understandable) backlash. This was especially ironic considering the bill would have altered an anti-masking law that was originally aimed at curbing the Ku Klux Klan.

My family has some Jewish roots. My great-grandmother fled Russia during the pogroms and came to America. Jewish people are, unfortunately, no strangers to policies of discrimination and hate that emanate from both official and private sources. That's why so many of them are speaking out now.

The fact that anything even remotely like this seems to be a matter for serious discussion should rattle all Americans to their very core.
