

The November AFS Meeting

Chris Jones "Psychic Scams"

We are very pleased to have Chris Jones of Atlanta Skeptics speaking to AFS on Sunday, November 13 about psychic scams.

Chris Jones

Jones is a native Georgian with some years spent in several other states along the way. He is a Corporate Finance professional who earned an MBA from Georgia State University. While none of that is at all useful for investigating paranormal claims, he has been an advocate for scientific skepticism for 30 years and an active member of the skeptical movement for 20 years. Currently he is one of three co-organizers of the Atlanta Skeptics, an organization promoting science, skepticism, reason and critical thinking.

Following is a description of his talk:

Psychics! Mediums! You've seen them on TV. You probably have heard their claims to be able to help you reconnect with your deceased loved ones or to discern what the future has in store for you. You're thinking something is amiss, but perhaps you're wondering just HOW they're fooling their audiences. Chris Jones is here to spill the beans and give you a peek behind that curtain.

The Atlanta Freethought Society is a member-run organization dedicated to advancing freethought and protecting the rights and reputation of freethinkers, agnostics, atheists and humanists.

We welcome anyone who is interested in learning about living a good life free from religion through attending AFS speeches, debates, and discussions. We employ protests, letters to the editor, broadcast appearances, and any other reasonable and civil means available to achieve our mission.

We define freethought as “the forming of opinions about life in general and religion in particular on the basis of reason and the evidence of our senses, independently of tradition, authority, or established belief.”

We actively support a strict separation of church and state as the best means to guarantee liberty for all, regardless of religious belief or lack of belief.

We seek to educate ourselves on many topics but especially on religion and non-religion. We do this through a series of thought-provoking speakers and programs, and by maintaining a web forum and an extensive library of freethought, religious, and related books, pamphlets, videotapes, and audiotapes.

We provide an organization where freethinkers and non-theists can develop friendships, talk freely, socialize and enjoy each other’s company. We do not discriminate against anyone on such irrelevant grounds as race, sexual orientation, age, gender, class, or physical disability. We welcome members and leaders of all political parties and preferences.

Because we are designated by the IRS as a 501(c)(3) educational organization, contributions to AFS are tax deductible. Any who are like-minded are welcome to join us.

Religious columnist endorses sexual assault braggart

Marietta Daily Journal - October 21, 2016

Dear Editor:

Marietta Daily Journal columnist Nelson Price (“Can a Christian Vote for Trump?,” Sunday, 16 October) certainly has a right to endorse a man who brags about sexual assault for President of the United States if he wishes.

But I’m a little surprised that he wants to put witches to death, keep women subservient to men, consider children as property, permit human beings to own other human beings, and condemn blasphemers to eternal torture (he decries those who “devalue the influence of Biblical morality”).

And I’m just plain astonished that he wants a President who’ll order specific holiday greetings (“It is a simple, but significant thing—Trump says we will be able to say ‘Merry Christmas’ again.”) Since we always have been able to greet as we wish, I can only assume Trump/Price want to start requiring religiosity.

I prefer liberty and the American ideal instead.

The First Transgender-Rights Case Reaches The Supreme Court

Nov 1, 2016 by Simon Brown in Wall of Separation

www.au.org/blogs/wall-of-separation

After the U.S. Supreme Court’s 2015 decision in Obergefell v. Hodges, which recognized same-sex couples’ right to marry, the fight to attain equal treatment for all advanced to a new and much-needed area of the law: protecting the rights of transgender persons.

Gavin Grimm, now 17, is a senior at a public high school in Gloucester County, VA. NPR reported that Grimm came out as trans during his freshman year. He was initially allowed to use the boys’ bathroom, but complaints from parents put a stop to that. The school board eventually instituted a policy that requires all students either to use the bathroom that corresponds with the gender they were assigned at birth or to use a designated single-stall restroom in the school.

In response to that discriminatory policy change, Grimm sued in federal court, arguing that the school was discriminating against him in violation of Title IX (a federal law that protects against discrimination in education on the basis of sex) and the Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution. As he told NPR: “The alternative facility was a unisex bathroom. I’m not unisex. I’m a boy. And there’s no need for that kind of ostracization.”

When describing how the bathroom battle has affected him, Grimm was blunt.

“I feel the humiliation every time I need to use the restroom and every minute I try to ‘hold it’ in the hopes of avoiding the long walk to the nurse’s office. And the humiliation can come when I least expect it,” he wrote in a column for The Washington Post.

Grimm lost the case before the trial court. The U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit, however, overturned that ruling in light of the U.S. Department of Education’s guidance about how Title IX protects the rights of trans students. The school board appealed that decision to the U.S. Supreme Court.

In August the Supreme Court voted 5-3 to stay the appeals court’s ruling, meaning that although Grimm won in the Fourth Circuit, the court’s order was not implemented, and he was still not allowed to use the boys’ bathroom. Justice Stephen Breyer said that he voted for the stay as a “courtesy” to the conservative Justices, to keep the status quo in place while the matter was pending.

On Friday, the Supreme Court announced that it will hear Grimm’s case, Gloucester County School Board v. G.G. Given that the Court remains one justice short of full membership, and we have no idea how long we must wait before we once again have nine justices, it’s difficult to say what the outcome will be.

“If you told me two years ago that the Supreme Court was going to have to approve whether I could use the school restroom, I would have thought you were joking,” Grimm wrote.

You can bet that Religious Right groups will argue that Grimm and other transgender students

Nearly all peoples have developed their own creation myth, and the Genesis story is just the one that happened to have been adopted by one particular tribe of Middle Eastern herders. It has no more special status than the belief of a particular West African tribe that the world was created from the excrement of ants.

Anti-Semitism Rears An Ugly Head During Campaign 2016

Nov 3, 2016 by Rokia Hassanein in Wall of Separation • www.au.org/blogs/wall-of-separation

We have spoken out about Islamophobia a lot during this election season, but there's another bad trend under way that shouldn't be overlooked: a rising tide of anti-Semitism.

The phenomenon has manifested itself in a variety of ways—whether it's through anti-Semitic graphics or attacks on reporters who are Jewish or perceived to be Jewish.

According to a Slate report, a Donald Trump supporter recently heckled reporters at a rally with a “Jew S.A.! Jew S.A.!” chant to use the stereotype that Jews control the media. This isn't a new trend from his supporters, since some have been targeting religious and ethnic minorities this election season.

Jonathan Greenblatt, the head of the Anti-Defamation League (ADL), which tracks hate speech against Jews and promotes equality, told *The Washington Post that although he doesn't know if Trump purposely promotes anti-Semitic rhetoric and stereotyping, it has been a problem from many of his supporters.

“Whether it's the speechwriters or his supporters, we're seeing tropes and stereotypes about Jews dominating the global banking system,” Greenblatt said.

Despite Trump spokesperson Hope Hicks noting that the Trump campaign “strongly condemns this kind of rhetoric and behavior” and that “it is not acceptable at our rallies or elsewhere,” anti-Semitism still persists within some aspects of Trump's supporter base.

Even Trump's eldest son, Donald Trump Jr., was recently under fire for making an offensive Holocaust reference to describe what he insists is the media's “double standard” between Hillary Clinton and his father.

“Without the media, this wouldn't even be a contest, but the media has built her up,” Trump Jr. told *Chris Stigall on Talk Radio 1210 WPHT in September. “They've let her slide on every indiscrepancy [sic] ... if Republicans were doing that, they'd be warming up the gas chamber right now.”

should be forbidden to use the bathroom of their choice to respect the religious beliefs of parents or students who oppose transgender rights on religious grounds.

Given what is at stake, Americans United expects to file a friend-of-the-court brief to respond to those contentions. Although it's too early to say what our argument will be, in cases like this we usually stress that religious freedom does not include the right to use the government to impose your religious beliefs on others. No American should have his or her rights denied because of religious objections to equality.

Americans United will continue to fiercely oppose any attempts to use religion to deny someone else's civil rights.

This case is one of many ongoing matters involving the fight over rights for transgender people. If you'd like to learn more, visit Americans United's Protect Thy Neighbor website.

Not all instances of anti-Semitism can be blamed on extreme Trump supporters, of course, but there's no denying that this has been an increasingly disturbing trend, especially on social media.

An October ADL study reviewed 2.6 million tweets that included keywords people often use in anti-Semitic smears that were sent to 50,000 journalists from August 2015 to July 2016. It found that 800 journalists received a staggering 19,000 anti-Semitic tweets from 1,600 users.

Even worse, the authors of the study noted that because it's hard to track all hateful tweets, “there is reason to conclude that the numbers in this report ... are conservative.”

There's a long history of anti-Semitism in the United States, and this election season is particularly bad. Among other things, the report found that the number of anti-Semitic tweets has “significantly increased starting in January 2016, as election season got into full swing.”

Some of the hate speech references the Holocaust—something that should never be joked about or referenced casually as Trump Jr. did. And there have been many death threats.

The examples of people targeting Jewish journalists are endless. If you want a tiny glimpse of what's it's like to be a Jewish reporter covering politics in 2016, read the article Jeffrey Goldberg, the editor-in-chief of The Atlantic, wrote in June featuring social media posts he receives on Twitter. His piece highlights the frightening hatred many people still carry.

It's disheartening that in 2016, some Americans still harbor these poisonous views. The United States has come a long way with religious tolerance, but we still have lots of work to do. All Americans, regardless of their religion or lack of religion, deserve to feel safe.

Humanists Stand in Solidarity With Standing Rock Sioux Tribe

americanhumanist.org/news

(Washington, DC, Nov. 2, 2016)—Leaders at the American Humanist Association issued the following statement in solidarity with the Standing Rock Sioux Tribe and the water protectors in Standing Rock, North Dakota:

“The American Humanist Association stands with the Standing Rock Sioux Tribe in their opposition to the Dakota Access pipeline and the oppressive practices imposed against this Indigenous community. As humanists, we affirm the importance of human responsibility and human accountability to identify injustice and to respond accordingly to validate the inherent value of those whose humanity is marginalized.”

Sincere Kirabo, social justice coordinator of the American Humanist Association, with Desiree Kane of the American Humanist Association’s Feminist Humanist Alliance are currently at Standing Rock, participating in the protest. Sincere Kirabo will also be interviewing protestors on site, and his report will be published in TheHumanist.com. The American Humanist Association’s Appignani Humanist Legal Center also objected to the prosecution of Democracy Now! journalist Amy Goodman when she was charged with rioting for filming the protests, a charge that has since been dropped.

The American Humanist Association is also supporting Foundation Beyond Belief’s efforts on behalf of the Standing Rock protesters. More information about how humanists can participate in Foundation Beyond Belief’s call to action is available at foundationbeyondbelief.org/standing-rock. The American Humanist Association is pleased to act as a partner with Foundation Beyond Belief, which is fundraising for Thunder Valley Community Development Corporation, a nonprofit organization and member of the Lakota Sioux Tribe, which is a sister tribe of the Standing Rock Sioux. Donations made to the drive will assist the Thunder Valley Development Corporation in purchasing supplies to winterize the Standing Rock camp. The Facebook event is at www.facebook.com/events/559430880925962.

The American Humanist Association will continue to advocate for the values of equality and justice for all people through the work of its social justice adjuncts:

Founded in 1941 and headquartered in Washington, D.C., the American Humanist Association (AHA) works to protect the rights of humanists, atheists, and other nontheistic Americans. The AHA advances the ethical and life-affirming philosophy of humanism, which—without beliefs in any gods or other supernatural forces—encourages individuals to live informed and meaningful lives that aspire to the greater good of humanity.

Foundation Beyond Belief (FBB) was founded in 2009 in Georgia, USA by Dale McGowan. FBB unites the humanist community in charitable and volunteer efforts, and advocates for compassionate action throughout the world. It’s up to us to make this world a better place.
